While sitting in a taxi on the way to a party in New York one windy March evening, Jeannette Waits catches a glimpse of her mother, Rose Mary Waits. (Mark) rifling through a dumpster for something to eat. Although Mom's hair is unkempt and her skin parched and raw, her endurance in going through the dumpster reminds Jeannette of how she was when Jeannette was a child.
Since she is only two blocks away from the party, Jeannette worries that Mom will see her and begin to talk to her, and that a fellow party guest will see them together. Jeannette asks the driver to take her home to her apartment on Park Avenue.
Back home, surrounded by her toys, old books, and Persian

01.06.2021 · Against this one fiery glass were glued the noses of many gutter-snipes, for the chocolates were all wrapped in those red and gold and green metallic colours which are almost better than chocolate itself; and the huge white wedding-cake in the window was somehow at once remote and satisfying, just as if the whole North Pole were good to eat. Below the castle's ocean blue skies, there lives a faithful friend of cute eyes. He often snuggles in large hands, and watches him cook with worn pans. None Ryles, Grounds Keeper's House Hogsworth -942 25 279 Below the foggy gray London sky, there lives a key behind broken glass. SCENE VI. Before Macbeth's castle. Hautboys and torches.
